

Reply to a post

1. Click on the conversation title

- Re: How can we avoid being seen by our GP colleagues as just another version of the PCT?
Shane agree but there must be the correct level of governance or otherwise we leave ourselves open to criticism and problems will occur. the key for me is to ensure that the burden of this is not too onerous and that one committee can sort it all. I worry that without the correct level of governance disasters will occur. This also reinforces my view that we need the right leaders to be identified early on. These people should then be given the opportunity of intensive support and training for the role.
23.08 - Tue 08 Nov 2011
- Re: How do we get from where we are now - new organisations not entirely sure of what we want and a bit wary of each other - to a more mature position?
Thanks Steve, this just shows how in different areas the local 'politics' is so important to how CCGs are developing. When there has never really been a good or

Governance arrangements

Forums are viewable to the network only
See the Resources section for case studies and other documents relevant to this forum. Moderated by Dr Sam Barrell.

Search Board
★ Show all recent activity
★ Show all unanswered

Governance arrangements
Network restricted (view and posting)

Conversation	Replies	Most recent comment
How are people going about maximising local decision making and identity in larger CCGs? by Marie Astford	5	by Paul Huselbee Sunday 21:53
Should the body for collaborative commissioning just be a forum for discussion and recommendation, with no powers to commit resources, or should representatives to such a body be authorised to	2	by Paul Huselbee November 01, 2011

2. Scroll down the conversation to Quick reply under the latest post

Body text
URLs will be automatically hyperlinked. Basic HTML tags are OK.

Type in your comments (or paste in from clipboard using CTRL+V)

- Basic formatting is available from the toolbar
- You can also Add Links

Post anonymously

3. Add your comments and click on Post comment