Hi Sarah,

This is the email I received about post discharge support.

Alia.

Subject: Transitioning neonatal care to home support

Dear colleagues,

We know that it can be very difficult for parents to look after their babies following discharge, especially if the neonatal unit has been their home for a long time.

To help parents through this process, you might find it helpful to look at a neonatal communication platform that links health professionals (nurses and doctors) with parents.

You can view this solution by clicking the link here.

If of interest, please contact me and I would be delighted to discuss this opportunity further.

With kind regards,

Ezam
