Hi Claire,

We would count it as 1 refusal at New Cross as the baby would then be "on the books" and offered the next available cot, however it is usually us trying to get babies back elsewhere and not vice versa . I can't say what the other units are doing though, I just have copies of their submitted data, perhaps we could clarify this.

Hi Mel

Please see query below from Claire Cockburn, I would be grateful if you would respond and copy Ruth, for consistency across the Network in order that all units are recording the same data in the same way.

Many thanks

Ok looks like we need to start collecting this which is fine. If an individual baby is refused more than once for what ever reason then accepted eventually how does this work? (ie refused 2 times counts as 2 refusals? or only one if it's the same baby).

Thanks

Claire

Hi Claire

I think that the transport data is collected by the NTS therefore this would be duplication of effort.

If I am wrong and you do need to collect this I will ask Ruth to confirm this with you.

Hi Sarah yes we have been doing this but its collected on an online questionnaire that I did not have a copy of. I will save the answers from now on. The only exception was the question about refused postnatal transfer requests. Does everyone collect this ? Unfortunately this is not something that is collected in BADGER but I will arrange this if it is necessary.

Thanks

Hi Claire

Thanks for this, however it should not have been an additional piece of work, as I understand each unit is being asked for this information nationally and having to provide this any way. The Network was just asking for a copy of the data that had been sent in order to collate it with the other units to get a Network picture.

Hope this helps.

Hello Sarah,
Sorry for the delay in this I have filled it in as best as I can for the two completed quarters. We do not have data on refused postnatal transfers to my knowledge.

If you have any queries on this please do not hesitate to contact me
